A law and regulatory analysis performed at a very early stage in a project can sensibly make a difference in the overall length of a project implementation schedule. Significant time reduction can be accomplished by detailing early in the project the permitting requirements.

Rudplan's team can offer its clients in the mining and mineral processing industries assistance in the evaluation of requirements in terms of environmental and general permitting.

Rudplan has worked closely with government authorities on environmental projects and is familiar with all stages of permitting, registration, approvals and implementation in several countries.

Services:

- Review and analysis of legislation and regulations requirements for industrial projects;
- Technical assistance in establishing and integrating permitting schedule to the overall project master schedule.